Searchtopic=I am looking for the following features in a method of distributing pharmaceutical product media (e.g. magnetic strip card, smart card, IC card (integrated circuit card) with prescription information):

--the method requires the activation and subsequent validation of the product media (i.e. card)

Activation includes:

- 1) the prescriber of the pharmaceutical product media (card) communicatively links the product media with a central computer
- 2) the central computer records information from the product media (i.e. card) into a database, and the card is activated. The information on the product media includes prescription/pharmaceutical products that have been prescribed by the prescriber for the patient.

Validation includes:

- 1) the person who has been prescribed the pharmaceutical product media presents the product media at a pharmacy.
- 2) the product media is communicatively linked to the central computer to determine if the product media has been activated by a prescriber.
- 3) the (pharmaceutical) product that is authorized and identified on the product media is dispensed, only if central computer determines that the product media has been activated.
